It is very difficult to convince children that a medicine is "nice to take"—this trouble is not experienced in administering of Cod Liver Oil. It is almost as palatable as milk. No preparation so rapidly builds up good flesh, strength and nerve force. Mothers the world over rely upon it in all wasting diseases that children are heir to.

St. Joseph Mo., Jan. 12.—My last bulletin gave forecast of the storm wave to cross the continent from the 14th to the 18th and the next, from Japan by way of the Bering sea, will reach the Pacific coast about the 18th, cross the Western mountain country by the close of the 19th, the Missouri valley and Western Texas the 20th, Eastern Texas and upper lakes the 21st, Ohio valley, lower lakes and East Gulf States the 22d and the Eastern States the 23d.

The warm wave will cross the Western mountain country about the 18th, the Great Central valleys the 20th and Eastern States the 22d. The cold wave will cross the Western mountain country about the 21st, the Great Central valleys the 23d and the Eastern States the 25th.

This disturbance will largely increase the rainfall of this month, a considerable portion of which, in the Northern States, will be snow.

The cold wave will be most severe in the Eastern States and snow may be expected in the far West about the 20th, upper Mississippi and Missouri valleys the 22d, Ohio valley the 23d and New England the 24th.

The month will close out with cold weather in the Eastern States and rising temperature in the West.

CHANGING CLIMATES.

Of course climates change; some suddenly others so imperceptibly that the changes are not noted in the memory of the human race. A change in climate so gradual as to require ten thousand years would be imperceptible to the human mind and the race would accommodate itself to new environments so gradually as not to note the constant change to a colder or warmer, wetter or drier climate.

A stupendous change in the climate of the Rocky mountain country has occurred, within ten thousand years past. New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho and Montana once constituted the Switzerland of America, well watered and fertile, no arid lands but as well adapted to agriculture as any mountain country could be.

At that time, probably not less than eight thousand years ago, that country was occupied by a superior race of people who had made remarkable progress in civilization.

Large numbers of the mummies of these people are now being discovered and exhibited in the museums and these mummies are fully as well preserved as those found in Egypt. Their wearing apparel, made of the yucca flax and furs, are well preserved.

The burying grounds of these people, or their wealthy class, being excavations in the solid rock of perpendicular cliffs, reached only by rope ladders, has led to the belief that they made their homes in these inaccessible caverns and they are therefore erroneously called cliff dwellings.

The Zuni Indians are probably a remnant of this once powerful nation and they have a very old tradition that their ancestors dwelt by the sea.

Geology tells us that the Alleghany mountains once extended through Kentucky, Tennessee, South Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, Indian Territory and the staked plains of Northwestern Texas. We see the worn down remains of these old mountains in what are now called the Ozarks, Cumberland and the mountains southwestward.

These mountains—having been thrown up by volcanic action before the great change in the earth's equator, long before the Rocky mountains had been formed and while the western mountain country and the Great Central valleys were covered by a great ocean—formed a mighty dam that, when the equatorial changes lowered the waters and brought North America to the surface, formed a great inland sea bounded on the west by the Rockies, on the south by the Ozarks, on the east by the Alleghany and on the north by the ridge running westward through Canada.

Among geologists there is no doubt that such a sea existed and that sea gave to the Western mountain country, a magnificent climate, a fine agricultural country, a result of which was a great race of intelligent, thrifty people.

But the outlet of this inland sea had its Niagara Falls which in time wore away and a channel, now a part of the Mississippi river, was cut through the Ozarks, the great inland sea was emptied into the Gulf of Mexico and thus deprived of its source of moisture that once agricultural land, now called the western mountain country, became arid.

In a small degree that climate may be reclaimed by storage of waters in great reservoirs, irrigation ditches and the cultivation of trees.

In Northern Siberia remains of tropical animals are found frozen in the ice where they must of remained many thousands of years in that condition. Their carcasses when thawed furnish food for wild animals.

Mammoths of a now extinct species are found there so well preserved that they are restored to life-like forms and exhibited in the museums. A remarkable fact about these animal remains is that they are found with tropical plants, vegetables and fruits in their stomachs and in their mouths, proving that they were in a hot country and that the climate suddenly changed to that of an arctic winter.

Learned writers have been greatly puzzled to account for these facts and the only theory that will explain them is that the earth's equator suddenly changed and that it originally extended from northeast to southwest through Siberia.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Siberia is 4,000 miles long, one-sixth of the earth's circumference, and ethnologists are agreed that it once contained all of civilization where the human race followed the pursuits of peace. This conclusion is arrived at by the languages of nations.

With the earth's equator as now located Siberia could never have been the Garden of Eden and the bible story of the fall of man is best explained by this sudden change of climate caused by the toppling of the earth, bringing the north pole nearer that country.

THE ADVERTISING LAW.

The Attorney General Proposes to Enforce It

Yesterday when the bids for furnishing stationery were called for, Attorney General Beatty, on learning that there was one bid in, inquired if the calls for bids had been advertised according to law. Mr. O. H. Grey was sent for and admitted that it had not been done.

Mr. Beatty then read the law on the subject and called the attention of the Board to the fact that it was mandatory. Mr. Grey said that it probably was, but the old Attorney General had stated that it was not necessary, and accordingly they had never done so. Mr. Beatty remarked that the State officers were neither legislative bodies nor judicial ones. They could not amend old laws or decide how they were to be construed. He also notified the Board that anyone could break a contract for these supplies unless the calls for bids had been advertised in a daily newspaper in Carson, Virginia City and Reno.

Mr. Fox was the only one who had a bid in, and it was decided to advertise the bids at once, and in the meantime supplies would be ordered of Mr. Fox until the new bids were received.—Carson Appeal.

AMERICAN CITIES

Their Population When Washington was Inaugurated.

When Washington was inaugurated Philadelphia, then the metropolis of the country, had only about 42,000 people, New York but 33,000, Boston 28,000, Baltimore 13,000, and no other city anywhere near 10,000. Even after the lapse of half a century, during which New York had overtaken Philadelphia, so that in 1840 it had 312,000 inhabitants to the latter city's 258,000, Baltimore and New Orleans were the only other places with more than 100,000 people, and except Boston with 93,000, all of the few remaining cities fell short of 50,000. During the formative period of the new nation, therefore, all but the merest fraction of the citizens lived in places of small population, the local affairs of which were easily administered through town meetings or other such simple machinery.—N. Y. Evening Post.

The Lady Accepted.

Lem Ogden of San Francisco and Miss Mae Putnam of Windsor, Sonoma county, were to have been married last Tuesday. On Monday Ogden suddenly took his departure for Chicago without giving any cause for so doing. John W. Kenny, now of Santa Rosa, but recently of Oakland, a former sweetheart of Miss Putnam, learned of Ogden's departure and sent word that if the lady was willing he would take the missing man's place at the altar. The proposal was accepted, and Kenny and Miss Putnam were married.

AN INSTRUCTIVE CATECHISM.

How the Plutocrats Decrease the Consumption of Commodities.

Question—What do the plutocrats mean when they say that the prices of commodities are governed by the inexorable law of supply and demand?

Answer—They mean to deceive the producers and make them believe that the cause of the low price which they receive for their products is due to over production.

Q—Does the law of supply and demand apply with as much force to money as it does to wheat or cotton?

A—Under our present plutocratic system of finance it applies with tenfold greater force to money than it does to wheat or cotton.

Q—How do the plutocrats decrease the consumption and prices of commodities?

A—By increasing the demand for money and decreasing the available supply.

Q—What kind of pressure do the plutocrats bring to bear on the people to increase the value of money?

A—They inform the people that money is tight and that no more credit can be extended to them. This produces the most rigid economy among the consumers which results in an enormous under-consumption, and the merchants and producers immediately feel the force of hard times and low prices.

Q—Can there be any remedy devised to restore prosperity?

A—Yes. It can be done by a humane financial system, and by the Government furnishing employment to the unemployed on public improvements.

Q—Has the Government ever had any experience in furnishing employment to a large army of men and finding a way to pay them without the aid of the plutocrats?

A—Yes, from 1861 to 1865, while the Government was in the throes of a civil war, it gave employment to nearly two million men, furnishing the munitions of war with which to fight its battles, and put nearly two billion dollars of new money into circulation.

Q—When did the plutocrats gain full control of the Government?

A—In 1866 the Government made an unconditional surrender to them.

Q—How have they managed the finances since they captured the Government?

A—They have burned the paper currency and are making the people pay interest on its ashes. They have demoralized silver. They have locked up the gold, and are now fleecing the people out of what little property that is left them.

MARRY IN GERMANY.

BUT IF YOU ARE AMERICANS BE PREPARED FOR A SIEGE.

Documents of All Kinds and Witnesses Must Be Presented to the Civil Functionary—The Trials of a Young Couple of Americans in Berlin.

It is often almost impossible for an American to secure the papers necessary to make a European marriage valid, especially in Germany. The lovers are frequently obliged to wait until they can repair to some less inquisitive land, where a priest or legal functionary will consent to unite them without asking superfluous questions. When the contracting parties are themselves Europeans, the formalities are probably formidable enough, for besides the actual marriage papers there are settlement papers and various preliminary documents to be drawn up. But if you are an American of course you are a suspicious character, and you will find it even doubly difficult to marry the girl of your choice. You must first prove your right to live and breathe and have your being, and your bride must prove her right to live and breathe and have her being, and your father, and your mother, and your bride's father, and your bride's mother must also prove that they were born in due time and have lived irreproachably ever after, and in case they no longer exercise the functions of living, breathing and having their being, it must be shown that they ceased to do so in a sober and godlike manner. All this and much more must be set forth in a quod erat demon strandum fashion by means of documents before you will be allowed to bend your neck to the conjugal yoke.

The truth of these remarks was illustrated a few weeks ago in Berlin, when the happiness of two young Americans hung for a long time in the balance until German authorities finally consented to let them join hands and hearts. The young man was an Egyptologist and found it necessary to be in Egypt at a certain time. He hoped to take his bride with him, but almost up to the last moment he was uncertain whether he should have a bride to take. For months he had been trying to bring about this marriage, but the requirements of the German law were enough to drive even a man accustomed to the complications of the Tel-el-el-Manah tablets to despair. The bride had lived formerly on the other side of the world, and as there existed in the cautious German mind the possibility that she might have gone through the marriage ceremony on some previous occasion it was necessary to publish the banns weeks beforehand, not only in the Berlin papers, but also in the journals of her native American town. Both parties were obliged to secure certificates of the birth and baptism of themselves and their parents, and to furnish an epitome of the family histories down to date. There is a rumor that testimony was even demanded as to the number of times certain relatives had been vaccinated, and the success of the operation. The young woman's father had died when away from home, and it was rather difficult to satisfy German authorities as to the manner of his taking off. Finally all the papers arrived, and the couple repaired on day with their friends and witnesses to the office of the legal functionary in whose hands their happiness rested.

The legal functionary, of course, had witnesses on his side. The Germans never transact any business except in the presence of witnesses. If you quarrel with the guard on a railway train, he immediately summons another guard, not to settle the dispute, but to witness it. They put their two solemn heads together, shake them at each other and at you, make copious notes of the facts and finally take themselves off. This bride couple and friends were similarly surveyed by the band of witnesses. Then the bride was placed in one chair and the bridegroom in another at a respectful distance. The papers were produced. The bride told all about herself, and the bridegroom told all about himself, and the friends and witnesses told all about both of them. The mother of the bride assured the assembled company that this man was not fitly and defiantly her daughter. The company began to breathe more freely. The bridegroom heaved a sigh of relief. The bride moved in her chair wearily. But the legal functionary was not going to let them off so easily. He shook his head over the papers, pursed up his lips and then turned on the whole crowd and asked them fiercely for their passports. Of course no one had such a thing about him, so the judge bridegroom had to rush off in a drowsy secure as many as were necessary.

Meantime a German couple appeared. Their papers, of course, were all right. The German bridegroom took possession of the American bridegroom's vacant chair, and the American bride, who, by this time, was almost in tears, yielded her seat to the German bride. By the time they had been safely launched upon the sea of married life the passports had been found, and the Americans again took the chairs and were finally made man and wife, to the satisfaction of the legal functionary, themselves and their friends.

That wasn't all, of course. They had to rush off, after the legal functionary's eye had been paid, to do honor to the ordinary conventionalities, array themselves in festive robes and be married again by a minister who spoke the English tongue, shake hands with their 500 friends and catch the first train for Egypt.—Berlin Cor.
